Description of Major: Studying philosophy helps students confront in a methodical and constructive way fundamental questions and problems, both theoretical and practical, about themselves, their culture, and the natural world. Philosophy addresses the “big questions,” including What is the meaning of life? What duties do we have to others? What makes a society or law just? Is faith compatible with reason? What is the relation of mind to brain? As the oldest and most basic of the liberal arts disciplines, philosophy provides a foundation for addressing such questions, but also cultivates skills in reasoning and argumentation that are critical to graduate studies, law school, employment, and, indeed, to be an informed and engaged citizen.

Majoring in philosophy allows students to develop familiarity with a basic intellectual vocabulary through which discussion of central questions has occurred, as well as an ability to recognize relationships between past philosophies and basic presuppositions of Western culture today. Philosophy also seeks to develop students’ ability to recognize philosophical issues and to assess critically the response of various thinkers to those issues, while developing empathic skills in entering the “mindset” of given thinkers. Majors will emerge with the tools for diagnosing their own intellectual presuppositions and those of their culture, thus moving them to develop and express their own careful thinking about central philosophical questions.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students will:

- Develop the interpretive, critical, and argumentative skills necessary for academic excellence, career success, and civil engagement.
- Know the major figures, issues, and debates in the history of Western philosophy, both ancient and modern.
- Explain, analyze, and evaluate the ethical and social issues that inform our personal and social lives.
- Create a perspective from which students can synthesize all their studies and develop a sense of how philosophy bears on other disciplines.

Preparation: The study of philosophy develops skills essential to success in future education and employment, including critical thinking, evaluation, and construction of sophisticated arguments, consideration of many different perspectives on a single subject, clear written communication on complex topics, and the ability to synthesize and organize complex information. Students majoring in philosophy often enter the fields of law, medicine, journalism, or business, in addition to pursuing graduate studies in philosophy itself. A major or minor in philosophy, in tandem with a major in a narrower professional field or another academic discipline, will serve the student well as career advancement comes to require the flexibility of mind, and insight into the essentials of a situation, as well as analytical skills.

It is suggested that the student consider a major or minor in a second field. The following courses, many of which also fulfill core curriculum requirements, are suggested but not required for the major in philosophy: ART 210 and/or 211; ECO 211 and/or 212; HIS 161, 162; PSI 202; PSY 153; REL 250; SOC 149, 150, 407; COM 210.
