The Social Science Divisional Major may be selected as a general social science option or secondary school teaching licensure option. Specific tracks exist for secondary education students who want a designation in a particular discipline. The general option may be selected by students who may later wish to pursue advanced degrees in areas such as social work, work with federal and state agencies, law or divinity school. All courses for the major must be completed with a grade of C- or higher. For students pursuing an initial licensure in secondary education, all coursework taken towards licensure must be completed with a C or higher. Normally this major will require ten semesters to complete.

For a list of professional education program requirements, see the Secondary Education section under "School of Education."
