Recognizing Article One of the Charter of the United Nations which states that the purpose of the U.N. is "to maintain international peace and security and to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace", and that to fulfill this, action must be taken against groups that use terror as a tool, and

Grieving by the threat posed and horrors committed by terrorist groups, such as Boko Haram and ISIL, the genocide of Yazidis and Assyrians in Iraq, and the abduction of schoolgirls in Nigeria, and

Noting efforts in the fight against global terror, such as the United Nations intervention in Somalia and Afghanistan, which prevented the situations from drastically deteriorating and saving countless lives, but

Bearing in mind the costs of foreign intervention, with the United States intervention in Afghanistan costing 1 trillion dollars and the lives of two thousand three hundred and sixty-one servicemen and women, and

Realizing the effect that foreign occupations can further fuel instances of terror, and anger the general population, and

Suggests the United Nations enact a new anti-terror plan, by making counter-terrorism take a different approach than used before, and

1. Urges for operations in support of establishing a strong local government which is in the position to combat terrorist groups and fulfill basic needs for its citizens;
2. Directs resources to fight corruption in government;
3. Supports mobile counter-terrorist forces that fall under local command but are monitored by the United Nations, eliminating the excuse that the locals have no control but maintaining that these forces won't become corrupted;
4. Designates specific impoverished areas for outreach, preventing extremism from taking root by improving the life of the poorest of the poor, by such initiatives as school and road construction;
5. Recommends the training of the effective local armed forces that will be able to combat extremism once peacekeepers leave, thus preventing a resurgence of insurgents.

Concerned that global terrorist organizations remain a threat to all societies and governments around the globe, especially in Central Asia and the Middle East, where terror groups remain a major issue, the Taliban, being responsible for an estimated 73% of the 521 civilian casualties in the conflict with Pro-Government Forces and Anti-Government Elements during the first three months of 2015, and that that figure has risen 8% compared to the casualties during the first three months of 2014, and

Alarmed that Afghanistan's opium harvest is a 3 billion dollar industry producing approximately 90% of the global opium harvest, which is taxed up to ten percent by groups such as the Taliban, and that the 2014 opium harvest reached record levels of land being utilized for the cultivation of opium, and that of the approximately 75-80 tons of opium being trafficked from Afghanistan to Russia, only an estimated 5% of the harvest is seized within Central Asia, and

Believing that only through global and regional cooperation can the funding of terrorist organizations through the opium and heroin trade be cut back, preventing the instability, corruption, and violence caused by insurgent groups, both globally and regionally, and

Appreciating efforts for global cooperation to stop the heroin trade during the Paris Pact Initiative, and

Welcoming efforts for regional cooperation in the form of the Central Asian Regional Information and Coordination Centre and the measures it takes to prevent trafficking, and

- 1.) Suggests the creation of a fund which nations may voluntarily donate to in order to provide subsidies to land owners so as to provide farmers a source of income other than opium, and
- 2.) Requests greater border security between Afghanistan and Uzbekistan, Tajikistan, and Pakistan, and for the latter countries to have better regulation of borders with Russia so as to increase the seizure of opium being trafficked out of Central Asia before it reaches its destination countries, and
- 3.) Recommends cooperation among Central Asian nations in combating the current threat from the Taliban and other groups such as Wilayat Khorason, and
- 4.) Urges Eastern European nations and volunteer nations to provide better funding and manpower to narcotics teams to better police the trafficking of opium as it leaves Central Asia and enters Europe through Russia, and to prevent manufacturers of heroin utilizing and profiting from the opium trade.

1 Bearing in mind the work of the United Nations Counter Terrorism Committee and the Counter-
2 Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate in combating terrorism around the globe, and

3
4 Realizing the massive strides made in countering terrorism by these bodies and governments
5 around the globe, such as the recent operations against Al-Qaeda in the Middle East, and

7 Noting with regret, however, that the number of deaths from terrorism worldwide has increased 8 five-fold since 2000, and the number of countries that have experienced over fifty deaths from 9 terrorist activity has increased from fifteen to twenty-four from 2012 to 2013, and

11 Alarmed by this steady increase in terrorist activity around the globe, as evidenced by recent 12 terrorist attacks in nations such as France, Tunisia, Nigeria, and others and the 60% increase in 13 terrorist-related deaths in 2014, and

Realizing that an effective response to terrorist attacks would help counter terrorism in the short and long run by promoting both short term stability and long term stability through the apprehension of both members who participated in attacks and helped plan them while also promoting a resilient, adamant stance against the transgressors, but

Concerned with the destabilization of the Middle East which appears to have been a result of the seemingly inadequate responses to terrorist attacks in places such as Iraq, Yemen, and Syria, and

Conscious of the events that occurred in Paris and Boston which ended with innocent lives being threatened due to the response, and

Further recalling the sieges upon the school in Beslan, Russia in 2004 and the theatre siege in 2002 in Moscow by terrorists, where inappropriate and unethical responses led to the deaths of a total of 518 hostages, including over 186 children in the response to the Beslan hostage crisis and,

Noting with deep concern that the UN Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy alludes to responding to a terrorist attack but does not mention any effective, universal strategy for responding to attacks, and

Guided by the belief that a response to a terrorist attack should be both cooperative, comprehensive, and focused on peace keeping and deterrence of terrorist attacks, and

1. Calls upon nations to either establish or increase communications between each other in order to establish a secure network in the event a terrorist were to escape the country in which the attack took place;
2. Requests that nations cooperate in order to respond to a terrorist attack by making contributions, such as trained personnel to conduct investigations, supplies for these investigations, or monetary donations to help fund any responses;
3. Supports the creation of "response groups", funded by the continent in which it is placed, but also not affiliated to any nation, that would be sent in at a moment's notice in order to properly apprehend suspects peacefully and in a way that would not cause a reaction amongst the people;
4. Emphasizes the need for confidence in the process, in the abilities of the government, and that a suspect can and will be apprehended at some point in order to promote stability and an image of security in times where it feels as if there is none.

Recalling the current eight millennium development goals, that range from eradicating extreme poverty and hunger to promoting gender equality and female empowerment, and their purpose to take steps towards improving the lives of people everywhere, and

Noting that this year, in 2015, countries are to adopt a new development agenda that are expected to build on and improve the plans of action for the current eight goals, and

Recognizing that the amount of people living in poverty has fell from approximately 1.9 billion in 1990 to 836 million in 2015, indicating over a 50% decline, and

Alarmed that women continue to face discrimination in access to education or work, participation in private or public decision making, and that globally, women earn 24% that of their male counterparts, and

Noting with grave concern that about 1 in every 122 people in the world is a refugee or IDP, internally displaced people, making the total linger around about 60 million, 20 million more people who have been uprooted and forced to leave their homes as a result of harmful conflict throughout the world than the 40 million that existed in 2000, and

Emphasizing that although the goal of halving the amount of people living in extreme hunger or poverty has been almost met, 825 million people are still living at or under $1.25 a day and 800 million still live with starvation which makes the eradication of these two issues the central goal in the post-2015 development agenda, and

1.) Encourages countries to support UNICEF and similar organizations by contributing funds to aid such groups in carrying out their missions to help give every child a fair chance at achieving success;

2.) Urges countries to help spread the need for gender parity in education and how educating girls has a ripple effect that can lead to not only households but also entire communities being lifted from poverty through organizations like UN Women;

3.) Calls upon every nation to work toward making both primary and secondary education universal and to support non-profit organizations like Pencils of Promises and Room to Read in their work of building schools, training teachers, and offering scholarships for children around the world.

1 EMPHASIZING that the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) have had a massive positive 2 affect on the entire world, and

4 NOTING WITH SATISFACTION that many countries have single handedly helped reach 5 certain goals, most notably:

- 6
7 a) the People's Republic of China helping lower the worldwide level of people living in 8 poverty from about 47% to 22%,
10 b) the Lao People's Democratic Republic, (Laos) having an enrollment rate grow from 11 9.4% in 1992 to 97.4% in 2011 thus helping raise the worldwide enrollment rate from 12 83% in 2000 to 90% in 2011,
14 c) Niger's mortality rate decreasing from in 1990, when almost one in three children 15 under the age of five died, to 2011 when the rate had gone down to about one in eight 16 children under the age of five dying, and

18 OBSERVING that there are many other nations that have also made great leaps in not only 19 creating a better country for themselves, but better regions, and a better world for everyone else, 20 and

22 FURTHER NOTING that there is still room for improvement across all the goals, such as the 23 ensuring of environmental sustainability, which very few countries have been able to fulfill, and
