

Unity Yields Results

The Economic and Social Committee jumped right back into rhythm following the lunch break. Just before the break, the delegation was considering resolution R-3/1. The committee immediately began authoring amendments to solidify what one delegate called an "already superb resolution". The session quickly entered into end of debate. Votes were tallied and the resolution swept the room and was widely supported by the entire delegation. Without missing a beat, the committee dove into the next topic: the Digital Divide.

The committee seemed united in the decision to consider resolution R-4/7. Delegates began to consider weak points of the resolution that needed to be addressed by amendments. With the day's session coming to a close, the delegates moved into end of debate. After the votes were counted, the resolution passed with the support of every single delegate in the committee except for one abstention. Unity proved to be the key in the ECOSOC committee this afternoon.
